

Daniel K. Nanghaka

Daniel K. Nanghaka is the CEO of ILICIT Africa (Integrating Livelihoods thru Communication Information Technology for Africa), Lead of The-Internet.Africa a platform to promote adoption for Modern Internet Standards for Africa, former Chair of FOSSFA (Foundation of Open Source Software for Africa), and Chair of ICANN At-Large Outreach and Engagement Sub Committee, Founder of Project Thread which is developing MESH Networks for disaster and emergency communications in Bududa.

Daniel is passionate about the Internet Technology transformation in Africa and strongly advocates for promotion of local content, Mapping, FOSS, Building Community Networks and Software Development, particularly supporting youth development and social justice programs. He has been active in the field of ICT and Internet Governance where he has contributed to various fora both locally and internationally.

He holds a Bachelor's Degree in Information Technology, Certificate in Software Engineering, Certificate in Scalable Network Infrastructure (AfNOG), trained in Information for Collaborative Development at the United Nations Institute of Training and Research, Impact Business Modelling and Investment (Ghana).