

Elizabeth Oluoch

Elizabeth Oluoch - Do Canto, is a Senior Policy Advisor within the Global Policy Development team where she supports the Policy team's activities in Internet Governance where amongst other responsibilities in her portfolio, leads the organization's engagement in various International Governmental Organizations including the International Telecommunication Union and the United Nations - New York. Additionally, she works on issues related to Internet restrictions within the organization's technology trust umbrella.

Prior to joining the Internet Society, Elizabeth served as a Senior Assistant to the Vice President of Resource Development at the Congressional Black Caucus Foundation (CBCF), in Washington, D.C. At CBCF, she supported a wide range of the development division's activities including donor tracking and outreach.

She also worked at TranSecur, a global travel security information provider for mostly Fortune 500 companies, founded by a former Assistant Secretary of Defense. TranSecur was the pioneer company for security risk tracking. Elizabeth was a contributor to the Women's Security information Section in the Country Security reports amongst other responsibilities.

Early in her career, she served as one-year term as an intern assigned to Senior Council to U.S. Senator Edward Kennedy on the Health, Education, Labor and Pensions Committee where she monitored banking issues during the overhaul of the banking industry.

Elizabeth has significant cross-cultural experience, having studied, traveled and lived in many parts of Africa and Europe. She holds a master's degree in public policy from American University and a Bachelor of Arts in Political Science from the University of North Carolina Central.